

David Barkin is Distinguished Professor at the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana in Mexico City. His principal field of teaching and research is Ecological Economics. He is a member of the National Research Council and works on issues of environmental justice in Latin America. At present, he holds the Georg Forster chair for climate-related research at the Humboldt University in Berlin. He has recently finished a book whose translated title is: "From Protests to Proposals" and is working on a volume to be entitled "Food: Sovereignty: A strategy for poverty reduction."