

Faustino Cobarrubia Gómez is Senior Researcher and Chairman of Department of International Trade and Economic Integration at the Centre for World Economy Studies (CIEM), Havana. He received his Ph.D. in Economics Havana University in 2008. His areas of specialization include international trade, human development, economic integration, international finance and the United States economy, and he has published widely on these topics. He has worked as a Consultant for the United Nations World Food Programme and as an Economic Advisor to the President of Cuba. He is fluent in Spanish and English.