

Patricia Harms earned her PhD from Arizona State University in 2007. She holds a duo appointment in the History Department and the Gender & Women's Studies Program, teaching courses in transnationalism, Latin America, the global south, the Atlantic world as well as gender in revolutionary movements. Her current research focuses on the histories of women in Guatemala and Latin America along with Latin American immigration to Canada.