

Jonathan Viger is a PhD candidate in the department of political science, York University, Toronto. His research focuses on international relations and social change in the Middle East from a sociohistorical and historical materialist perspective. He has published on the topic of geopolitics and revolution.